Fourth Annual Repatriation Conference Advocating for Our Ancestors

November 13 – 15, 2018

Forest County Potawatomi Hotel & Casino
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Association on American Indian Affairs
Protecting Sovereignty ◦ Preserving Culture ◦ Educating Youth
Since 1922

Dear Cultural Sovereignty Protector,

Greetings, on behalf of the Association on American Indian Affairs, the longest-serving Indian advocacy organization in the United States! I invite you to attend our Fourth Annual Repatriation Conference, November 13-15, 2018 at the Forest County Potawatomi Hotel & Casino in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. We also invite you to become a conference sponsor.

Our theme this year, ADVOCATING FOR OUR ANCESTORS, will focus on how Tribes can implement a strong repatriation strategy that supports the repatriation of ancestors, their burial items, sacred objects and cultural patrimony through NAGPRA and other federal laws, what to do when the legal system does not support repatriation, and repatriation from institutions and private entities in other countries. By bringing together Tribal Officials, elders and youth, Tribal cultural resource practitioners, spiritual leaders, attorneys, academics and government officials we can develop hands-on tools and strategize solutions to safeguarding our cultural and sovereign legacy for our children.

This packet provides various options for your commitment to ADVOCATE FOR OUR ANCESTORS which will assist Tribes develop programs, tools and advocacy that will bring our Ancestors and their items home. Please do not hesitate to contact us at 240-314-7155 or general.aaia@indian-affairs.org to provide your commitment.

Association on American Indian Affairs

Protecting Sovereignty ◦ Preserving Culture ◦ Educating Youth
Since 1922

WHO WE ARE

The ASSOCIATION ON AMERICAN INDIAN AFFAIRS, or AAIA, is the oldest American Indian advocacy organization in the United States, founded in New York City in 1922. The organization began – moved by Pueblo land claims issues – with the tradition of serving Indian Tribes, their citizens and all indigenous communities within the United States with a mission of protecting tribal sovereignty, preserving culture and educating youth.

AAIA involves itself at the grassroots and national levels in partnership with Tribes and tribal peoples to seek solutions and policies that empower individuals and contribute towards self-determining and sustainable Indian communities.

REPATRIATION OF CULTURAL ITEMS

AAIA has advocated for the protection and repatriation of cultural items over the last 60 years, including the development of the National Museum of the American Indian Act, which provides a mechanism for repatriation of cultural items from the Smithsonian Institution, and the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act, which provides for repatriation and graves protection involving museums, and federal and tribal lands.

As part of its Repatriation Program, AAIA:

- (1) Provides a centralized information hub of expertise and information that provides training and supports repatriation efforts domestically and abroad;
- (2) Develops templates, toolkits and model laws that can be used by Tribes to support repatriation of human remains, funerary objects, cultural patrimony and sacred objects;
- (3) Advocates for stronger laws and policies that protect human remains, funerary objects, cultural patrimony and sacred objects on private lands, and items held by private collectors domestically and abroad; and
- (4) Raises awareness and provides educational opportunities domestically and internationally with governments, institutions and the public to influence positive action towards addressing repatriation issues.
